

#BeTheCount Census Art Contest

April 1st is Census Day!

Thursday Network has partnered with The Black Swan Academy and DC Action for Children to launch a virtual student arts competition to help middle and high school students channel their creativity during the COVID-19 school closures.

Despite the closure of schools, students are continuing to create, dream, and express their ideas through their own unique talents and abilities. We're inviting students from across the district to enter our #BeTheCount Contest and inspire youth and their families to complete the census. It's a chance to be involved in a movement that only happens once every 10 years.

Click here to learn more about our Census Art Contest. We are super excited to see all of your art! A panel of accomplished artists will select middle and high school winners with prizes up to $200. Submit your entry by May 1st. Winners will be announced May, 15, 2020.

For questions or concerns email
civic@thursdaynetwork.org

